Controversial site visited

CARMEL HIGHLANDS residents who toured the proposed homesites on the Sawyer property were treated to magnificent views of the mountains to the east and ocean to the west. Above, a couple of visitors viewed the state parks land directly south and east of the Sawyer property. The road was built by miners decades ago. Below is a stake marked to show a homesite with a sweeping view of Point Lobos directly west, Carmel, Monterey and Santa Cruz to the south. Cost of the site — without the residence — is expected to be about $1.2 million. For story, see page 9. (Michael Gardner photos).

Mayor wants parking and restrooms

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL MAYOR Charlotte Townsend wants the city council to consider purchase of the Grunion Run property for public parking and restrooms.

The mayor's proposal is to be discussed by the council when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, March 5 in the Bingham Room inside the Sunset Center complex.

Discussion of the Grunion Run property, on the south side of Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets, is only one of several council agenda items related to properties. Other issues before the council include:

- The future of Flanders Mansion, which will cost about $350,000 to renovate. The council needs to determine whether to fix, sell, demolish or lease the mansion inside Mission Trail Park off Hatton Road.
- A council position on a proposed hotel and residential project on the Point Lobos Ranch across Highway 1 from the state reserve.

- Consideration of a draft ordinance to prohibit new "transient occupancies" of less than 30 days in the residential zone.

- Restrictions on parking and fireworks on Carmel Beach during the Fourth of July.

Plans already have been submitted to the Carmel Planning Commission to develop 10 condominiums and two apartments on the 16,000 sq. ft. Grunion Run property.

The proposal was submitted by Richard Frisbie of the Santa Cruz-based firm The Environment Center. Frisbie has not revealed the names of those he represents.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz in late 1984 commissioned an appraiser for $1,200 to tell the city how much the Grunion Run property is worth.

The answer is $960,000, according to Haskell Berry of Urban Property Research of Monterey.

Mayor Townsend is pushing the hardest for council consideration of a backup offer in case the proposed development tails through.

"I am still most interested in discussing it," Mayor Townsend told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Feb. 22.

"We'd look silly if we didn't at least discuss it after commissioning the appraisal," she said.

"I am interested in pursuing any possible purchase to nibble away at the parking problem."

AND THE mayor added the city must always be alert for potential properties available in the commercial district.

"Any downtown or large parcel — the city is going to be looking at them. Take that as a rule of thumb," she said.

The mayor does not think there is any problem with the council talking about purchase of the property when an application for development already is on file.

"Our interest probably has been there as long as the other person's. We expressed an interest in the property quite a long time ago," she said.

The mayor's proposed backup offer is greeted lukewarmly by fellow council members.

"I'd want to talk to her before really commenting," Councilman Robert Stephenson said. "We have other things to work that we haven't been doing. My first concern is a surface parking lot at Sixth and Lincoln."

Stephenson was referring to his plan for a surface parking lot on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue, which is the site of the original proposal for a Harrison Memorial Library annex.

Asked why he wants a parking lot there when the site may be used for library expansion, Stephenson replied: "We could do the lot and use it for 20 years before we get around to building the library (annex)."

No 'Toledo,' please

Dear Editor:

Reference is made to the Monterey Peninsula Herald editorials promoting the Spanish Bay Project. When the Herald was purchased by the Toledo Blade, a commitment was made to perpetuate the quality of life nurtured by the former local owners. The Herald should not prostitute the residential character of this area to advance growth and aid developers.

Concerned municipalities voted to block the project because of inadequacies in the plan and pressure from their constituents. Peninsula residents are extremely agitated with the problems caused by endless unnecessary development.

The land use plan devised several years ago has become obsolete. This is not the same peninsula of that era nor is it the same peninsula of six months ago. Development has mushroomed.

Information from the developer's report was taken at face value by the Herald. It should examine the environmental impact report to note the inaccuracies, distortions and omissions. Items listed as unavoidable adverse impacts with no solution or mitigation possible, have been ignored.

Traffic engineers have suggested that overpass ramps and interchanges (big city style) may help alleviate the problem on Holman Highway 68 and other impacted areas. Regardless of proposed mitigations to be funded by taxpayers, the road network was not designed to handle the growing volume of traffic nourished by new development.

The Herald should stop promoting new development in an effort to change the peninsula into a "Toledo." Peninsula citizens will no longer stand by and watch the residential quality of this area deteriorate even further.

'You stole a person'

OPEN LETTER TO A THIEF:

(On Feb. 4, my wallet was taken from my handbag in the kitchen of the art gallery in Carmel in which I work. My distress over this incident was so great, I sought this means of clearing it from my mind and feelings.)

When you stole my wallet, you not only stole what the wallet contained. You stole a person. A friend. Perhaps a future lover. Or spouse. As well as cash, receipts, checks, photographs and keys, the wallet contained a very special personal card. It was given to me by a person I met on a flight from Los Angeles to London, a delightful man with whom I talked and laughed from sunset to sunrise.

The long dark of the long night passed quickly in the happy sharing of mutual interests, experiences, dreams. And a promise to write was made. A promise that cannot be kept.

You not only stole money. You stole my trust in strangers, the security that saved and banked money gives, privacy (isn't a wallet a repository for many of one's most prized personal things?), even the feeling that my home is a safe place.

I know that many thieves like you lure victims away from their homes with a telephone call that they have "found" the wallet and will return it at a specified location and time. And when the victim returns from the phony rendezvous, he finds his home has been emptied of valuables.

You haven't robbed my home. Yet. But will you? You did make a call telling me where I could pick up my "found" wallet the next day. That gave you extra time to "work" my charge cards, as well as to delay my changing locks.

Even my identity was stolen. Have you ever tried to cash a check without IDs?

Later, perhaps, I'll be able to laugh at my attempt to buy a new wallet. I couldn't charge it, since I had by then reported your theft of my cards, nor could I have my check accepted without IDs. It was necessary to go to the bank, get cash, and take it to the leather shop in an envelope.

Meanwhile, there's the anxiety as to whether you cashed the paychecks in my wallet, thief, or how much you charged to my accounts.

Luckily, no one asked for my driver's license before I could replace it.

Hey you, out there! When you rob persons or their homes, you steal much more than money. You steal attitudes which can never be restored to innocence.

Even without a gun or a knife, you wounded me.

'Wasn't my laundry'

Dear Editor:

I cannot believe that a "reputable" paper such as the Pine Cone/Outlook would print such garbage as you have on pages 1, 2, 4 and 5 of today's (Feb. 21) issue. Your irresponsible allegations that there is a "move for independence," a "resident rebellion," and that "Rippling River residents — and all those who in some way receive assistance..." are resentful of their "caretakers" and wish to "take over" their low-rent housing are an insult to low-income people everywhere.

Careful reading of the story reveals that this is not a "movement"; it is an opinion of one or two people that has attracted more than 10 percent of the Rippling River residents — probably less than that now that Mr. Moore's letter corrected some of the wilder misstatements. You must have really been hard up for news this week. I don't think the National Enquirer would have touched such a flimsy, half-baked delusion.

I object to the front page headlines, the sensationalism. It reflects badly on the decent people who live here, some of whom are involved in community service, volunteer work, and are too busy to sit around, pout, and "resent their caretakers."

I object to being misquoted. Had I known you were going ahead with this story, I would have given you a statement, in writing or on tape. As it is, you have put strange words in my mouth, and — though you have paraphrased some of what I said — the quote marks lead readers to believe those are my words. They are not.

This letter is for the record — please don't change a word of it. You have washed some people's dirty laundry in public. I want your readers to know it wasn't mine.

Control water district

Dear Editor:

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is in the process of applying to the county planning commission for a master special permit which would give them control over all applications for works along Carmel River.

Ideally this centralized control should expedite individual works and coordinate them within an overall river protection plan. We would like to see such a committee formed, of knowledgeable and qualified Carmel Valley residents.

However, such a committee should be independent of water district personnel. When the district certified the environmental impact report on the Carmel River Management Plan and the Boronda Erosion Control Project, they clearly showed their lack of professional expertise, and their uncaring disregard for the future health of Carmel River, as well as the open-ended cost assessments that would be levied on every riverfront property owner.

The EIR states that the Boronda project is "a gamble." No one knows what will happen to the stability of the existing bridges, nor the extent of new problems that are expected to occur downriver by the increased downcutting of the riverbed and the resultant loss of water table depth, not to mention the increased velocity of water flow. Such an experiment may cause permanent irreparable damage and jeopardize the entire length of river.

Take heed! The water district must not be given further control over this vital natural resource, which is so important to the future quality of life in Carmel Valley and the Monterey Peninsula.

Don't need a recall

Dear Editor:

The Carmel Unified School District does not need a recall.

Our community does need to unite in an effort to repair the damages done by a sustained divisive drive.

It saddens us to think of the time, energy, and money spent on an unnecessary and undesirable campaign fraught with emotional duress and bitterness.

We do desperately need to turn our attention to how to best help our children. They are the common concern we share and the thread that binds us together as teachers, parents, and staff.

The existing balance of the present board — two teachers, two businessmen and one housewife/school volunteer — is an effective one. Their 90 percent unanimous voting record is an impressive one.

This August, anyone may file for the two seats available in the November election. We strongly urge a positive expression and process rather than a debilitating recall.

We would hope that the greater good for our children and the credibility of our community would take precedence.

Let us wisely spend our time and money in areas of positive change and growth:

- A conscientious attempt to bring recognition at the state level of the special financial concerns of this unique district.
- Support our teachers and staff financially.

- Maintain the dynamic and obviously successful programs for our children.
- Provide the example to our children that what unifies us must be of greater value than what may divide us.

Let us not further subject ourselves to the trauma of a recall.

In good faith, let us preserve and protect the sensitivity and respect of others with the knowledge that to make things better, we must work together.

Taxpayers, take note

Dear Editor:

The dust has barely settled from the November election, in which the overwhelming majority of Americans sent Congress a clear message: No new taxes! And, cut federal spending!

Despite that message, key leaders in Congress already are balking and proclaiming the need for higher taxes in addition to spending cuts. This is arrant nonsense and utter irresponsibility.

The visible national debt is approaching $2 trillion and just the interest payments on that debt now take the third-largest "bite" of total federal spending. We cannot afford any more years of $175 to $200 billion deficits. And "trimming" a scant $40 to $50 billion is not going to solve the problem.

Congress is choking on gnats and swallowing the camel whole, when it comes to reversing years of their giveaway spending habits.

Clearly, the only way we are ever going to achieve congressional spending restraint is to place Congress under the discipline of the United States Constitution and, as President Reagan declared in his inaugural address, make it "unconstitutional for the federal government to spend in any year more than it receives, in revenues."

In brief, a balanced federal budget/tax limitation amendment to the Constitution is needed. And now! Already, 32 states of the necessary 34 have called for such an amendment. Readers who make $35,000 a year or less (and account for 90 percent of all taxable income) are advised to write ACTIV, P.O. Drawer 330, Aptos, Calif. 95001-0330, and find out how to get involved in forcing Congress to begin acting responsibly and prudently with our tax dollars.

A modest proposal

Dear Editor:

Each Thursday when I pick up the Pine Cone/Outlook I first look to see if the library question has been resolved, but no. Somehow I get the feeling that our town's movers and shakers would like this hot potato to just go away.

We all know that the thing closest to the heart of any politician is a permanent monument to his or her time in office — a park or a building that has a discreet bronze plaque with the date and names of the instigators. Well, I've got a proposal that will knock the socks off the city council and the planning commission:

The Golden Arches of Learning

Yep, you guessed it. Twin golden arches of steel and glass, spanning Ocean Avenue and housing our new addition to the library. The north end would lie at the entrance to our present library, span Ocean to the divider, the second span from the divider to the south end of Ocean. Where the arches join, a modest-sized bronze plaque with the inscription: Harrison Memorial Library, Arches Branch, and the date and names of our politicians.

In addition to the library stacks and reading rooms would be "people movers" to transport us over the traffic below and avoid those cars with the funny license plates that try to nail us in the crosswalks. (What crosswalks?) I have a hunch the "you-know-who" in San Diego would foot the bill for this and save us a bundle.

When the good folks of Fresno and Bakersfield and L.A. learn of this they will descend upon us in droves for they will feel comfortable and welcome to our town instead of feeling looked down upon. I predict a 27 percent increase in tourism the first year. You say we can't absorb any more tourists? Pass on to phase two.

At the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sixth, a five-story parking structure will be erected complete with a restaurant on top so we can enjoy our beautiful bay. (How come we don't have a restaurant that overlooks our bay now?) Parking would be $5 for each four-hour period. Why take a chance with the meter maids when you can park and walk?

In order to expedite the flow of traffic to the parking facility a large, flashing neon sign would be erected at Ocean and Junipero. This sign would direct visitors to Sixth Avenue (one-way westbound) then into the parking area. Upon leaving the structure, visitors would exit again onto Sixth (west) to Monte Verde, right to Third and they would be on Highway 1 before they knew what happened.

I predict that this flow would actually reduce traffic on Ocean and neighboring streets while at the same time increasing the inflow of dollars to our coffers.

Correction

The Frank Lloyd Memorial Bench that overlooks Carmel Beach is not to be moved as part of the beach walkway plans.

The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook in its Feb. 21 edition inadvertently switched the location of the bench from Santa Lucia Avenue to 13th Avenue.

The bench, dedicated by the city to honor the late councilman, will remain at Santa Lucia Avenue.

State backs off from Mission Ranch purchase

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THERE APPEARS little hope the state will buy about 11 acres of Mission Ranch meadowland as an addition to the bird sanctuary at Carmel State Beach.

The California Parks and Recreation Commission is to complete its priority list for spending about $35 million in 1984 Park Bond Act funds March 15.

A preliminary report to be issued March 1 lists the Mission Ranch Resort meadow acquisition as priority three ("not urgent"), according to Ron McCall, state parks deputy regional director in Monterey.

McCall said there will be "very few" changes in the priority list — including maintaining priority three for Mission Ranch — despite lobbying by local residents and Assemblyman Sam Farr of Carmel (D-28th).

The approximately 11 acres are owned by Mission Ranch Corp.

Spokesman Douglas Tuck has indicated the corporation would be "happy" to sell the site if an agreement is reached on the price. He did not reveal the price for the property.

The potential state purchase would include only the vacant meadow land. The hotel and restaurant buildings are not part of the proposal.

A state purchase of the meadow could bring an end to the controversy over development at Mission Ranch Resort, just southwest of the city limits near Carmel Mission.

Mission Ranch Corp. has submitted an application to the county to build up to 66 residential units on the approximately 20 acres. The proposed development would set aside only 4.68 acres of the ranch as "protected wetlands."

However, the city of Carmel, the Concerned Neighbors of Mission Ranch and environmental groups contend that most of the meadow — between eight and 11 acres — should be set aside as protected wetlands.

Development is not permitted in protected wetlands areas and therefore fewer homes could be constructed if additional acreage is set aside.

The city and neighbors group successfully petitioned Monterey County Superior Court to set aside a decision by the board of supervisors to rezone the property for residential development before certification of an environmental impact report now under preparation.

City officials fear over-development of the Mission Ranch property will create additional traffic, water supply, sewage disposal and pollution problems in Carmel.

If the state purchases the meadow area that the city contends is wetlands, then the controversy over development may end.

campaign by Betty Bell, the wetlands area probably never would have even been considered for state acquisition.

Bell, chairwoman of the Concerned Neighbors of Mission Ranch, mounted a letter-writing campaign more than a year ago to determine whether the state is interested in purchase of the wetlands as an addition to the bird sanctuary.

"This land is part of the fragile ecology of the Carmel River estuary," Bell wrote in a Jan. 18, 1984 letter to Richard Felty, regional director of the state Parks and Recreation Department based in Monterey.

"If all or a significant part were acquired by the state parks department it would complement the area already administered by the parks department, would protect the bird sanctuary and the important environmental values of the Carmel River Estuary" she added.

Two weeks later Felty responded to Bell's letter.

"As you know we were concerned that some type of development planned for the area would be detrimental to our bird sanctuary," he wrote. "I have initiated the formal land acquisition investigation."

That eventual investigation led to a staff report recommending that the state place a "high" priority on purchase of the wetlands area.

The report cited environmental factors and its "danger of imminent intensive development" as reasons for purchase consideration.

In an October, 1984 letter to Bell, Monterey County Director of Parks Pete Soderberg wrote: "I agree that this wetlands area is an important resource that should be considered by the state for addition to the estuary they now own."

Soderberg also sent a copy of the letter endorsing state purchase to Felty.

The Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club in October unanimously endorsed state acquisition the site.

"The land in question is part of the fragile ecology of the estuary and it also is important to preserve it in order to protect the bird sanctuary," wrote Dick Dalsemer of Carmel Valley, chairman of the executive committee in a letter to Bell.

The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society, although not specifically stating support of state purchase, in a Nov. 19 letter to Bell implied that it opposes any development on the wetlands site of Mission Ranch.

Else Wickham, conservation chairwoman, called the area an "irreplaceable habitat for both resident and migratory birds in Carmel Lagoon."

"IN THE entire central coast this is a unique nesting and resting spot, as well as an important part of the food chain," Wickham wrote.

"Everything possible should be done to minimize this destruction, both in size of area to be moved (by bulldozers) and in degree of upheaval during the work," she added.

But State Parks Director William Briner, in his recommendations to the legislature, listed the wetlands as a "priority three" purchase.

In state jargon, priority one is "highest priority to be completed as soon as possible." Priority two purchase is "high priority to be undertaken as soon as funds become available." And priority three is "not urgent."

Briner's priority three designation is opposed by Assemblyman Farr, county parks officials, and the board of supervisors.

In a Jan. 7, 1985 letter to Briner, Farr wrote: "This item, in my opinion, should be raised to at least priority two and perhaps to priority one."

"This property is very valuable inasmuch as it adjoins the existing bird sanctuary and the Carmel River State Beach property," Farr wrote.

"There are at present pressures to develop a portion of the property in question and local conservationists have determined that the wetlands in question will suffer tremendously without state assistance (i.e. purchase)," he concluded.

Soderberg, in a report to supervisors dated Jan. 15, 1985, said the county parks commission endorses a higher priority for state acquisition of the Mission Ranch wetlands.

And Soderberg reminded supervisors that the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program includes a policy to protect wetlands.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors responded by asking Chairman Dusan Petrovic of King City to write Briner and ask for a higher designation.

Bell has asked that proponents contact local legislators and the parks commission to express their support of state acquisition of the Mission Ranch meadow.

Coastal Commission to hear Spanish Bay, El Sur Ranch

THE COASTAL Commission will consider two major controversial and court-challenged projects when it meets in Carmel March 27-29.

Commissioners are to review the use permit application for the proposed Spanish Bay resort in Pebble Beach and a tentative development agreement for the El Sur Ranch in Big Sur.

A scheduled date and time for each hearing are to be announced in mid-March.

Commissioners got their first look at the proposed El Sur Ranch development Feb. 13 in San Francisco.

However, commissioners did not want to rush the first Monterey County combined development permit and postponed action for a month.

Commissioners also want to see detailed plans for development of a 100-unit motel, restaurant, and 98 residences on El Sur Ranch — a 7,100-acre spread that stretches on both sides of Highway 1 between Molera State Park and Bixby Bridge.

Under the development agreement approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, owner James Hill will keep the residential development out of public view and dedicate the Highway 1 eastern frontage as open space.

Hill also will sell more than 3,000 acres to the state parks department, Save the Redwoods League, and Coastal Conservancy so it can remain as open space.

Big Sur resident Francis Jeffrey, through Carmel Valley Attorney Alexander Herlson, has challenged the development agreement in Monterey County Superior Court. No court date has been scheduled.

Jeffrey believes the development will adversely affect the environment, allow Hill more development rights than given to other property owners, and illegally take away the police powers of the county.

Jeffrey also claims there is little public benefit if the state and conservation organizations must buy land for open space that would not be permitted as development sites anyway.

Another development — the 270-room hotel with 80 condominiums and golf course Spanish Bay resort in Pebble Beach — will be tackled by the commission in March.

The cities of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel have filed a joint lawsuit that challenges the use permit for the project. The major bone of contention is traffic.

Use permits for the El Sur Ranch and Spanish Bay resort projects were issued by the former board of supervisors, which did not include Karin Strasser Kauffman of Carmel Valley and Sam Karas of Monterey, both active conservationists.

Council to take stand on Point Lobos Ranch

"We've bought quite a bit of property and we should divest ourselves of our other projects first," Councilwoman Helen Arnold said.

And Councilman David Maradei added: "I'd like to see the council finish several of the projects it has right now."

The council members' statements are in reference to such projects as senior citizen housing, Flanders Mansion, parking at Sunset Center and the library expansion.

IN A separate land matter, the council also is to discuss the future of Flanders Mansion.

The city has received an engineer's report that estimates it will cost more than $350,000 to renovate the mansion, which now is rented to the John Cunningham Art Institute and as a private residence.

The council is in a quandary over what to do with the mansion. Choices include repairing it at the high cost, selling the property as a private residence, demolishing the building, or leasing it as a youth hostel.

The American Youth Hostel group has indicated an interest in renovating the mansion to be used as a 29-bed inexpensive dormitory-style hotel with about five parking spaces.

In another matter, the council will discuss restrictions on fireworks at Carmel Beach on July Fourth.

The fireworks issue has been hotly debated for the past two years. The council is torn between the traditional fireworks and the need to protect Carmel Beach from an onslaught of visitors.

If past votes hold true, fireworks will be prohibited from the beach on a 3-2 vote.

Councilman James Wright will be the swing vote. Wright refuses to discuss city business outside of council meetings. However, Wright in 1984 voted to prohibit fireworks from the beach.

It now appears that Mayor Townsend and Arnold want to allow fireworks while Maradei and Stephenson support a ban.

"I'm on record as being opposed to fireworks because they attract people to a beach that's still in a fragile state from the winter storms that hit us two years ago," Maradei said.

"Nothing has come up that has caused me to change my mind," said Stephenson, who in the past voted to ban fireworks.

But Mayor Townsend sees fireworks as a "family tradition."

Three Gamble purchase choices

THE CARMEL City Council may ponder three different purchase proposals for the Gamble estate when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, March 5 in the Bingham Room inside Sunset Center.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz has investigated several different choices as a result of problems with the original plan for the Chicago-based investment firm of Borge-Warner to buy part of the 56,000 sq. ft. property bordered by Santa Lucia and 13th avenues and Lincoln and Dolores streets.

Under that plan, which still is a possibility, Borge-Warner would buy four of the nine Gamble lots for about $685,000. The city then would later act as a go-between to sell those four lots to a private developer.

The other five lots, including the house, would be purchased for about $715,000 by the Carmel development firm of Tescher-LeVette. That portion of the plan will remain unchanged even if the financing plans change for the other four lots, Schmitz said.

Because of still-unspecified problems with the Borge-Warner deal, City Atty. Don Freeman is in negotiations with an unidentified private firm to assume the role Borge-Warner is to play.

Or, as a third choice, the council may consider declaring itself a redevelopment agency or non-profit organization so it can sell bonds to finance purchase of the four lots while at the same time trying to resell the property.

Under state law, a city cannot buy property unless it is for public use. The purchaser must be a non-profit institution or a redevelopment agency.

Because the city is neither, the council sought Borge-Warner to act as the buyer of the four lots. The council also does not want to commit such a large chunk of the city budget to the Gamble purchase in case resale takes longer than anticipated.

The city and Tescher-LeVette entered into an agreement for the Gamble purchase because the council was fearful that a developer would build the maximum number of units allowed.

Before the agreement and subsequent adoption of a specific plan, a developer may have been able to build 14 residences on the Gamble site.

The mayor said the problems at the beach do not occur until "after 10 p.m. when the rowdies come in. Family and fireworks and beach picnics I feel are a wonderful Carmel tradition."

ARNOLD also agreed with the mayor that state-licensed "safe and sane" fireworks should be allowed on the beach.

The council also will consider Scenic Road parking and fire restrictions on the beach during the Fourth of July.

Council members are more in harmony over those two issues, having banned late-night fires on the beach. No parking is allowed on Scenic Road that day.

In a separate issue, the council is to be asked whether it wants to take a position on development of Point Lobos Ranch, across Highway 1 from the state reserve.

The Monterey County Minor Subdivision Committee is to review the rezoning, tentative tract map and environmental impact report for the project when it meets at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 28 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Architect Paul Davis has submitted plans that envision two 120-room hotels, a 500-seat convention center, 42 residences, employee housing, youth hostel and equestrian facility.

If the committee endorses the project, it will be sent to the county planning commission for review in March.

But the Carmel City Council may want to block approval of the project. The council — through lawsuits — already has blocked a 162-residence development on the Odello East property, about one mile south of Rio Road.

The council is concerned about the impact the Odello property could have on traffic, sewage disposal, water supply and pollution in the area.

The same concerns are expected to be addressed by the council on the Point Lobos Ranch project.

Although not specifically suggesting a lawsuit may be in order, council members have indicated it is appropriate for the city to review proposed developments on Highway 1.

"As far as I'm concerned, if it impacts Highway 1, it impacts us," Arnold said.

Councilman Stephenson said he hasn't seen the proposed project and could not comment.

Mayor Townsend said: "Whatever happens down there will impact our village and we're interested in what's happening down there."

"You can take it as a given that we'll be looking at all land use issues down there."

And Maradei added: "I'd like to see us concerned about every major project from here to San Simeon. I know the traffic that will go there (Point Lobos Ranch hotels) will go through Ocean Avenue."

"We have to be concerned about any large development and our concerns are based on the impact these projects will have on the quality of life we enjoy in Carmel," he said.

Sewage dumped into Carmel River

By ROBERT MISKIMON

RAW SEWAGE was dumped into the Carmel River three times this month by the Carmel Sanitary District, despite a federal order to cease the discharges.

Sanitary district directors learned of the spills when they met Thursday, Feb. 21. The discharges occurred Feb. 2, 3 and 8, according to Manager Michael Zambory.

In the first two instances, the spills were caused by objects which got sucked into the treatment plant influent pump, causing a shutdown while workers unclogged the pipes, Zambory said.

The third discharge was caused by heavy rainfall which caused the pumps to overflow. Such spills have been common in recent years, but a new influent pump station designed to handle such peak storm loads is to be completed in June.

"We have been doing this for years," Zambory told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "This is the very last winter we'll spill anything into the river."

Duration of the Feb. 2 spill was one hour and 40 minutes; the Feb. 3 spill lasted one hour and 25 minutes; and the Feb. 8 spill lasted two hours and 52 minutes, Zambory said.

The Environmental Protection Agency last month found the Carmel Sanitary District in violation of federal water pollution laws and ordered it to cease discharge of raw sewage into the river. The district could be liable for fines of up to $25,000 per day for each violation, according to EPA officials.

Zambory said the EPA action is nothing but "harassment" since the district has been aware of its unavoidable discharges during storm conditions and has initiated — despite denial of EPA grant funds — a new pump station with increased capacity. That equipment is to become operational in June.

"The problem here has been in existence for years and we have a good audit record showing we've been trying to solve it," Zambory said. "EPA is just trying to make us look bad with the public when we're doing something about it."

Although assessment of fines against the sanitary district seems unlikely, Zambory said he was certain the board of directors would choose to fight any such fines in court.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, sanitary district officials reached informal agreement to increase annexation fees after increased discharge capacity is granted by the Regional Water Quality Control Board.

The state board is to consider the district request to increase discharge capacity from 2.4 million gallons per day to 3 million gallons per day when it meets April 12 in San Luis Obispo.

Carmel sanitary officials originally had asked for an increase in capacity to 4 million gallons per day to provide needed additional treatment services to Pebble Beach. But since the Pebble Beach Community Services District has decided to press ahead with its own treatment plant, the Carmel district has asked for the lower amount, Zambory said.

The Pebble Beach district, which now has no treatment facilities, purchases one-third the capacity of the Carmel Sanitary District. Increased discharge capacity would enable the Carmel plant to service such undeveloped areas as Point Lobos Ranch and the Odello property.

However, directors reached informal agreement Feb. 21 that annexation fees would probably double for areas to be included in the district service area. Current charge per residential unit annexed to the district is $375, but that figure would have to be increased to between $500 and $830 per unit, Zambory said.

The increased fees would be based on current value of plant facilities and operating costs, but would not affect current customers. Directors are to consider the fees for official action at their March meeting.

CARMEL RIVER was polluted with raw sewage discharged from the Carmel Sanitary District on Feb. 2, 3 and 8. The discharge was concentrated in this stretch of the river, seen

City council to consider law to close retail shops at dusk

AN EMERGENCY ordinance requiring most retail businesses to close by dusk will be considered by the city council when it meets at 4 p.m. March 5 in the Bingham Room inside Sunset Center.

The draft ordinance was placed on the council agenda at press time and details were unavailable by deadline.

The draft ordinance apparently is in response to Craig McFarland's Cottage Row retail complex. Leases for retail shops in that building, northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue, apparently require businesses to remain open until 9 p.m.

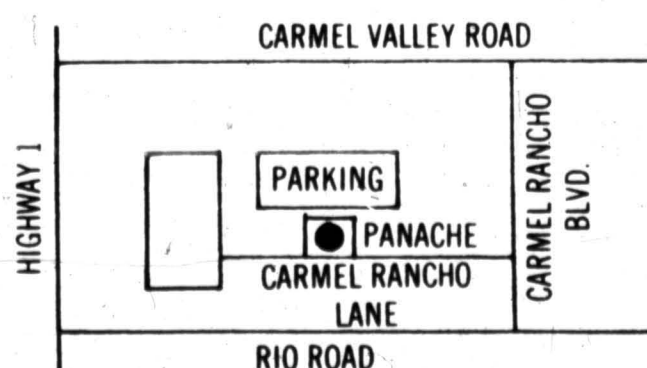

The council may enact emergency ordinances when there is any threat to the health, welfare and safety of the citizens.

It is uncertain whether the draft ordinance is targeted at just retail shops or will also incorporate restaurants.

City gets tough with Eastwood office plan

ACTOR CLINT Eastwood this year will not be able to build his downtown two-story retail and office complex even if he somehow gets city approval.

That's the opinion of Planning Director Diane White after the planning commission on a 4-3 vote rejected Eastwood's proposed project, west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues, in a Feb. 20 meeting.

The planning commission decision "probably" will be appealed to the city council, said attorney Brian Finegan, who represents Eastwood.

But even if the council overrules the planning commission, groundbreaking could not begin for at least a year.

Because of a water shortage, the city has adopted an ordinance that prohibits new commercial shops unless the use will consume less water than the previous use.

The restrictions in that ordinance will not be reviewed again until early 1986.

Currently, there is the Shell Fisher Gallery building, a vacant lot and the Nishi Nursery on the project site.

Those uses consume one-tenth of an acre foot of water, according to the city. That's the equivalent of 32,585 gallons. (There are 325,851 gallons in an acre foot.)

The new building would consume a little more than eight-tenths of an acre foot, estimates Michael Ricker, demand management coordinator for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

But despite the estimated increase in water use, the commission decided to hear the application once again.

Commissioners mostly are concerned about the size of the building (22.5 feet high), its mass as seen from the public way and the potential increase in traffic in the block.

Opposed to the development were Chairwoman Sandy Swain and Commissioners John Logan, Gene Cava and Gene Hammond. Voting to accept the design were Commissioners Art Mertens, Richard Barrett and Fred McNulty.

Two years ago Cava approved of the project. His vote made it 4-3 to support the development.

However, Carmel City Council members David Maradei and Helen Arnold appealed the planning commission approval to the full council, which eventually unanimously rejected Eastwood's project.

The four members who opposed the project this time around said they did not believe architect George Brook-Kothlow had made substantial enough changes to meet the concerns expressed by the council.

THOSE CONCERNS basically were mass and bulk as seen from the public way. The council also did not like the modern design and its possible impact on traffic.

At the Feb. 20 session, Hammond called the project one of "enormous significance to the community."

Hammond described the project as "a present day shopping mall design."

Cava said he could support the design, but only if Brook-Kothlow reduced the size and incorporated additional design features to reduce its mass and bulk as seen from the sidewalk.

"Eventually I'd like to see the building at this location," he said.

Mertens called the design "a contribution to architecture in Carmel... This is a credit to the community which prides itself in artistic courage. It's not a multi-story monster."

Board seeks committee on traffic problems

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors has proposed formation of a joint advisory committee to develop solutions to Monterey Peninsula traffic problems.

Supervisors Karin Strasser Kauffman of Carmel Valley and Sam Karas of Monterey were backers of the advisory committee, which was unanimously approved by supervisors at their Feb. 12 session.

Strasser Kauffman and Karas both successfully campaigned on platforms that included calls for more cooperation between the cities and county. They will lead the newly formed committee.

Supervisors directed staff to prepare an outline of key areas to tackle and future goals. That report is to be presented to the board at a later date. The cities then will be contacted to send a representative to the meetings.

"Basically we have a mess," is how Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman summarized the traffic problem on the Monterey Peninsula.

"How do we get out of it? We get out of it by coordinating our efforts. That wasn't done in the past," she told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Strasser Kauffman envisions that the committee will "start small" with informal coffees between county supervisors and representatives from the cities of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel.

Later as work progresses, Strasser Kauffman hopes to open the committee to representatives from Del Monte Forest, Seaside, Marina, Del Rey Oaks and Fort Ord.

"At the moment our plan for it is purposefully loose," she said.

"We'll start out with Pacific Grove, Carmel, Monterey and Sam and I and just have some discussions looking at the problem. We'll bring in other jurisdictions as we go along.

"Right now we want to limit ourselves in terms of what we can promise. There may be problems that are insurmountable. It will give us a chance to make a long hard effort at real master planning," she indicated.

"We're all in this together. Our populations overlap and our projects overlap," she believes.

"We certainly can move faster through discussion than lawsuits," she said.

Strasser Kauffman's statement was a reference to the many legal clashes between the city of Carmel and Monterey County over land use planning.

She also hopes cooperation can successfully end the lawsuit filed by the cities of Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey that challenges county approval of the Spanish Bay resort, a 270-room, 80-condominium and golf course complex in Pebble Beach.

Representatives of peninsula cities had been previously contacted and indicated an interest in the committee, she added.

The city of Carmel can be counted on to serve on the committee, said Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilmen Robert Stephenson and David Maradei.

"The cities and county definitely need to combine their efforts to address these problems," Mayor Townsend said.

"We all live on the peninsula together. What one city does impacts another. I think traffic is a mutual problem that should be addressed by all of us," she said.

"The time has come for this type of planning when the communities and the county communicate," the mayor said.

Mayor Townsend predicts a successful advisory committee such as this one could lead to joint discussions on other peninsula-wide problems such as water supply, sewage capacity and housing.

"We'll be happy to discuss anything with them," Maradei agreed. "We want a voice in these things. It's better to communicate."

And Stephenson added: "I think we should be involved as long as we're citing Del Monte Properties (Spanish Bay) and development elsewhere as our problems."

WORKERS CLEARED away tree debris from one of the vacant lots on Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues, which soon will be developed as a low- and moderate-cost housing project for senior citizens and the handicapped.

Senior housing plans take shape; will get city review next month

PRELIMINARY plans for a 15-unit senior citizen and handicapped housing project on Dolores Street in Carmel are expected to be ready for review in March.

Monterey architect Gene Takigawa will unveil tentative plans for a still-to-be-scheduled meeting of the city-Monterey County Housing Authority advisory committee for the project.

The Carmel City Council has hired Takigawa to design the low- and moderate-cost senior citizen and handicapped housing project on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

The city has spent a little more than $700,000 over the past several years to purchase the five 4,000 sq. ft. lots.

Under terms of a joint agreement, the city will donate the land for the project. The housing authority will pay construction costs and maintain the housing once it is available.

The city also reserves the right of approval of plans for the project. Takigawa's preliminary plans will first be presented to the city-housing authority committee.

Membership of the committee includes Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend, City

Councilman Robert Stephenson and housing authority Executive Director Bruce Moore.

Takigawa recently met with Carmel City Administrator Doug Schmitz to discuss preliminary plans.

After the meeting, Takigawa stopped by the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook to give a brief description of the project he envisions.

One key issue is whether some of the apartments at the back of the property will have to be two-story to maintain maximum open space on the site, Takigawa said.

"We're trying to develop a garden area for each tenant. Those things are very important for the elderly," Takigawa said.

And Takigawa wants to leave a large open space area at the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue as a buffer from the commercial activity and post office traffic.

Each one-bedroom unit will be between 550 and 650 square feet.

"We also want to maintain an identity for each unit. We want to make them a little individualized through the design," Takigawa said.

The project design also must be endorsed by the planning commission and city council.

Under his proposed schedule, Takigawa expects construction to begin in spring of 1986.

Developer withdraws application

Sawyer project stalls as compromise sought

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A PROPOSED amendment to the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program to allow 14 homes on the Sawyer property in Carmel Highlands has been put in abeyance while the owner tries to work out a compromise with opponents.

Gary Snell of the Sur Chiquito partnership has withdrawn his application for 12 homes in the hills and another two in the flatlands of the approximately 450-acre Sawyer property east of the Mentone and Mal Paso Roads intersection.

Snell wants to meet with Carmel Highlands residents in a still-unscheduled session to discuss their concerns, which mostly focus on water supply, sewage disposal and condition of the roads.

Several members of the Monterey County Planning Commission visited the Sawyer property in Carmel Highlands Feb. 20. Snell and his staff also gave about 15 members of the public a guided tour Feb. 21.

The commission — after hearing some public testimony Feb. 13 — continued its review of the project so members can visit the site. It is called the Sawyer property because it previously was owned by Charles Sawyer.

But Snell, before the Feb. 27 commission meeting, said he would withdraw his application until after he can meet with the residents who oppose his project.

"Because of concerns expressed by some local residents regarding sanitation, open space and other environmental issues, I have decided to withdraw my application...for the time being so that I may meet with and provide information to those people who have expressed concern," Snell wrote in a letter to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The existing Carmel area coastal plan would allow up to 16 homesites in the forested flatlands area.

Snell claims the change to allow 14 homesites, which will sell for about $1 million each, actually will be less environmentally damaging than the original plan for 16 residences.

Snell will financially help improve the roads leading to his development. And 14 units will have less of an impact on the roads than 16 new homes, he claims.

Two 30,000 gallon water storage tanks will be constructed where currently there is little water storage available in Carmel Highlands, he said.

The sewage septic tanks will be "thousands" of feet away from the water and therefore there is little chance of contaminating the supply," Snell alleged.

NONE OF the homes will be visible from Highway 1, he said.

The undeveloped property will remain in permanent open space, he said.

And half of the approximately 650 trees in the flatlands would have to be torn down if he developed that site, Snell added.

But the development has come under vehement protest from some neighbors.

Protestors claim the development will intrude on the public "viewshed" and wreak havoc with the roads, sewage disposal, and water supply in Carmel Highlands.

Opponents of the project, who Feb. 13 presented the commission with a 121-signature petition asking for denial of the amendment proposal, prefer that Snell develop in the flatlands area.

A development in the flatlands would cause fewer traffic, sewage and traffic problems, they claim.

The Mal Paso Creek Property Owners Association has opposed the proposal. But some members of the Highlands Bixby Advisory Committee has endorsed Snell's project.

The Carmel Riviera Water Co., which is responsible for water service in the Carmel Highlands, also opposes the project.

"Our entire water supply comes from wells and Mal Paso Creek, all downslope from the projected changes in the LCP," wrote Harold Seyferth, chairman of the board of directors.

"Nothing must be permitted to endanger, impact, contaminate, harm or interrupt the water company, its wells, sources, roads, storage and service.

"Developing, in any way, the upper portions of the subject property presents a potential danger to the community water supply," Seyferth alleged.

Snell's environmental consultant, Denise Duffy and Associates of Monterey, contends the project is sound.

Duffy said she has formed an advisory group of residents who will inform her about the concerns of the neighbors and suggest project modifications.

Duffy said soil engineer preliminary tests indicate that the homes do not pose a threat to the water supply.

Percolation tests under the supervision of county officials also will be conducted. County Environmental Health Officer Walter Wong also must issue approval before construction can begin, Duffy added.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

THE USE permit for Chateau Julien winery will be the subject of review by Monterey County Zoning Administrator Dale Ellis at

2:40 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 28. (Michael Gardner photo.)

County to review use permit for Chateau Julien Winery in Valley

MONTEREY COUNTY Zoning
Administrator Dale Ellis may not need to schedule a public hearing to understand how Carmel Valley residents feel about Chateau Julien.

Ellis is to review the use permit for Chateau Julien at 2:40 p.m. Thursday, Feb.
28 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

If Ellis rules there is sufficient information presented to warrant possible revocation or modification of the use permit for the winery, he will order a public hearing for March 28.

Several members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association have promised to attend the meeting to seek enforcement of the original use permit for the winery.

Chateau Julien owner Bob Brower refused
a request from the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook for a tour of the facility and an interview with him.

"I don't think we'd like to do that at this point. We'll just decline comment at this point," Brower said.

But the critics of Chateau Julien are not shy about discussing their opposition.

The CVPOA long has been a critic of the winery on the south side of Carmel Valley Road about six miles east of Highway 1.

The major complaints expressed by the CVPOA are that the use is not strictly agricultural, that the night lighting is obtrusive and that the winery allegedly operates a gift shop, according to president Jerry Foot.

Foot said the original use permit requires the winery to be open only to private vintners and no retail sales are allowed.

But when she toured Chateau Julien "we found out the private winetasting had turned out to be public. I went on the tour and saw a gift shop in one corner with T-shirts."

The CVPOA also is angered at the night lighting. "The lighting stuck in everybody's craw. It's supposed to be unobtrusive and harmonious," she said.

Former CVPOA President Robert Greenwood said the lighting makes Chateau Julien look like an airport.

"What I'm most disturbed about is the outside lights. It's been compared to an airport runway. It's not suitable for the Valley," Greenwood said.

Greenwood added that he also wants Chateau Julien to abide by its use permit and not allow public winetasting and functions at the winery.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser
Kauffman of Carmel Valley opposes the commercial functions of the winery when its permit requires agricultural use.

"They're not exactly tilling the soil there,"
she said.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

A brief history of the Valley Community Center

By LUCY MORRIS

MEMBERS of the board of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center thought Pine Cone/Outlook readers might enjoy learning something of the history of the Valley community center.

This article is intended to give a brief background of the evolution of the organization which has become known for such memorable events as Santa's Fly-in, Monte Carlo Night, Music in the Park, the Halloween Party and a host of ongoing programs and activities.

In 1951, a group of local citizens joined together because they wanted to provide facilities for youth activities and for general community use. This was the beginning of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. Many organizations in the Valley participated in different kinds of fund-raisers to provide money for the proposed buildings.

The money raised by local groups was supplemented by a grant from the Crosby Fund and a mortgage loan. In 1953, construction of the center began. By February of 1954, the center had its first social function. Since that time, the facilities have been used and supported by organizations such as the Brownies, Girl Scouts, Mothers Club, Cub Scouts, Movie Programs, Women's Club, Chamber of Commerce, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, Garden Club and many others.

In the mid-1960s, the Olympic-sized pool was built. This addition to the Community Center dramatically increased its use and exposure within the community. The Activity House and accompanying 1.25 acres of property were purchased in 1979. The Packard Foundation gave the Community Center a no-interest loan of $11,500 for the down payment.

The Monterey Regional Parks District bought the property and then leased it back to the CVCYC with the stipulation that the park be developed. The result of that development is clearly visible to members of the community who have enjoyed the park since its grand opening celebration in June of 1983.

Improvements included a Tot Lot, designed so that young children would have facilities to play on. Soon to be added to the Tot Lot is a 1948 fire truck which has been donated by the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

IN RECENT years, the pool has undergone major renovation, including resurfacing and the installation of a solar heating system and solar pool covers.

Last summer, the parking lot was paved and concrete sidewalks were poured. Plans have been approved for the installation of outdoor toilet facilities, and construction is scheduled to begin in the next few months.

The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center has been in existence for more than 30 years and has developed a wide community following. It owes its past to the scores of dedicated volunteers who have given so generously of their time and energy.

If you haven't become acquainted with the center, stop by or call the executive director's office for more information about programs and events. Louise Riddell-Kaufman, director, is available Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon at 659-3983.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Valley meeting explores child safety issues

By SUSAN BOCK

THE ALARM has been sounded. A child is missing. Somewhere in the community a young boy, aged 10, wearing a red shirt, blue jeans and blue and white sneakers, has been swallowed up without a trace.

He was last seen by his mother in the early morning as he slammed the front door and headed for the school bus at the end of the block. As the alert goes out, the parents anxiously wait by the telephone hoping and praying that someone will find their child safe and sound so their worries will be over.

Unfortunately, the only picture of Bobby they can give the police is more than one year old and they have no fingerprints to help identify the child should this need arise. He has no special features, no birthmarks, no bruises or scars. He has blond curly hair, blue eyes, is about three feet tall and looks like a million other normal healthy youngsters.

You hear the story on the news and you feel sorry for the parents. You shake your head sadly and go about your business shutting out the possibility that the same thing could happen to one of your own children.

You haven't kept their school pictures for the past two years but it won't matter. You haven't had a fingerprint made to be kept with all your other more important papers. That doesn't matter either — until tomorrow when you get a call from the principal asking where little Joey is because he didn't make it to school that morning.

The only way to alleviate these fears is to realize that there is a world full of people whose behavior parents cannot control, according to two local law enforcement officers. Because this is a fact of life, parents must become aware of their responsibilities as parents and to teach their children also to be responsible and aware.

Groups of concerned parents have formed in communities all over the country and are learning to become aware of safety measures needed to protect their children and how to teach these same children simple principles of safety they can understand and use themselves.

The Adam Walsh Child Resource Center, located in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has designed a "Safety with Strangers" program for kindergarten through third grade and advocates not only awareness for children but also fingerprinting and keeping an updated photograph. Of equal importance is a court monitoring system to heighten community awareness of incidents of child molestation and abuse to make sure that adults who exploit children are held accountable for their crimes and that child victims are treated fairly and sensitively by the courts.

THE NEED for action stirred a small group of local women who met last week at The Crossroads Community Room and listened to a talk by Deputy Monterey County Sheriff David J. Allard and Lt. Donald Fuselier of the Carmel Police Department.

Both men emphasized the need for parents and concerned citizens to learn how to fingerprint the school children and to make sure parents have both the fingerprint and an updated photo in a safe place at home. The fingerprint can't ensure a child's safety, but becomes an extremely valuable tool if the police need to identify a very young child, an injured child who cannot speak or an uncooperative child.

Sometimes a fingerprint can be useful in determining where a missing child has been. It might place the child in a suspected abductor's car or in a building where someone thinks he might have seen the child.

Although some parents have objected to fingerprinting their children, Allard noted that the objections stemmed from the parents' fear that other people would have access to their child's fingerprint. This is not true. The only copy would be kept by the parents themselves in the safety of their own home.

Parents were warned that there are now many do-it-yourself kits on the market as well as fingerprint banks. The kits may not provide classifiable prints. The banks are money making systems which offer to store the child's prints for a fee and clearly violate the common sense rule that the parents alone have access to their child's prints. Equally important is an updated photograph.

After showing a short film on crime prevention designed to make youngsters aware of different methods of crime prevention, Feeseber and Allard urged the group to sign up volunteers to learn how to fingerprint and to approach everyone in the community to support their endeavors.

Pat Owens, a foster parent, talked about the importance of court monitoring of abused and molested children. She is raising a small child who has been declared legally blind because his parents shook him so violently.

All 40 women at the meeting signed their names and addresses on a volunteer sheet to promise not only moral support for the project but their time and energy as well.

Trustees reject land offers

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education Monday night tackled issues that ranged from a new principal at Carmel High School to portable classrooms at Carmel River School.

Trustees have scheduled a special meeting for Friday, March 1 to continue their budget review, which will include consideration of staff layoffs and the future of the seven-period day at Carmel Middle School.

The special session, which is open to the public, will be at 4 p.m. in the middle school library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

In various actions, trustees:

- Approved a one-year leave of absence for high school Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly, who plans to travel and do some private consulting work.

Kading-Kelly is promised an administrative or teaching job if she decides to return. Also, she has agreed to consider a part-time administrative position if her services are needed during her leave of absence.

- Hired Kading-Kelly's assistant, Joe Feldeisen, as the new high school principal beginning this fall.

- Rejected two offers to trade property for 20 acres of district-owned land on Scarlett Road in Carmel Valley. Trustees think they can get cash for the site, which is appraised at about $650,000.

- Rejected a five-year lease of Carmelo Elementary School proposed by Pat and Suzanne Faverty, who want to operate a pre-school and kindergarten at the facility closed in 1982 because of declining enrollment.

- Approved the Faverty's offer to lease Carmelo School this summer for their Camp Carmel activities. The rent still is to be determined.

Trustees heard reports from elementary school principals about over-crowded conditions, especially at River School.

Ideas included changing the grade-level structure at all elementary schools and re-opening Carmelo.

Interim Supt. Rich Hawkins said he will have a specific proposal for the board within six weeks.

The board received a report by middle school Principal Frank Lynch, who predicted that a seven-period day at the middle school with 50 minute classes rather than the current 47 minutes, could cost an additional approximately $25,000 to add another bus run.

Trustees accepted the resignation of Business Manager Ed Miyasaki and his Administrative Secretary, Susan Peak, and approved a temporary reorganization of the central office staff. Hawkins' proposal is not to fill the business manager or administrative secretary positions until a new superintendent is hired.

district $70,000 more because of inflation adjustments.

The issue, Hawkins said, is how to come up with the $70,000, plus some kind of reserve, and funds to grant salary increases.

And another problem to confront the district is a growing imbalance between salaries offered by other districts and Carmel pay policies, he said.

Hawkins warned that if Carmel does not begin to reach parity with other districts, such as Monterey, Pacific Grove, Alisal and North Monterey County, then the best new teachers will be lost to those schools that can afford to pay more.

Hawkins also commented on several fund-raising proposals the board is expected to review more closely Friday.

But he did not express optimism about the fund-raising schemes, such as the state lottery, sale and lease of district property, and "per family" donations to the district general fund.

The state legislature already has discussed how lottery monies can be spent, which would mean the district could not use those dollars for the general fund.

The general fund is an unrestricted budget, which is mostly used to pay staff costs.

"I don't see anything that I'm willing to hang my hat on," Hawkins said in explanation of the big question marks on his budget chart.

He also presented the board with a list of budget-cutting proposals, including administration, the changes to the class schedule at the middle school, and reduction of the number of sports at the high school.

But Hawkins reiterated his doubts that any of the short-term reductions will save enough money to soften the budget crunch.

ALTHOUGH HAWKINS didn't specifically say so, it appears the largest savings could be realized through staff reductions.

That, too, presents problems.

Under state law, the district must notify administrators by March 1 of impending layoffs. Teachers must be told by March 15 and classified staff are to be given 30-day notice of termination.

Confronted with the state-imposed deadline, the board has scheduled that Friday, March 1 budget review just in case there is a need to consider staff reductions.

Village Inn opens at The Crossroads

THE VILLAGE Inn at The Crossroads opened on time (Feb. 20) and is serving up a storm.

The restaurant that opened in the former Seasons location is the second in a series of Village Inns due to open in central California according to Bob Rose, president and part owner of Cornerstone Foods, Inc.

Cornerstone, which is based in Santa Barbara, holds the central California franchise for the 25-year-old Denver-based Village Inn Corp.

The family restaurant has a breakfast, lunch and dinner menu served 24 hours a day and special Nite Owl Features served from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. Children 10 and under have a section of the menu devoted just to them.

"Eighty-percent of the Village Inn menu is breakfast, especially the omelettes, so we have retained those," Rose said. "We (applied) our own abilities (to) the lunch and dinner menus."

"We make most things from scratch," Rose added. "The pancakes are not made from a batter mix, the hamburgers are not pre-pattied. We have a fresh fish-of-the-day."

The menu also includes crepes, specialty pancakes, chicken, steaks, pork chops and sandwiches.

"It's a place where you can get something unusual or a basic homestyle meal," Rose said.

CBA INSTALLS OFFICERS

The Carmel Business Association installed new officers, picked a "sweetheart" and just "partied hearty" in general at its installation dinner Feb. 16 at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

Ellie Lester, owner of Ellie's Hayloft in Carmel, was installed for a second term as president. Joan DeMers, vice president of San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan branch at the mouth of the Valley, was installed as vice president, and Gaspar Cardinale of Cardinale's Fine Shoes in Carmel Plaza was installed in his second term as treasurer.

New members of the board of directors were introduced by master of ceremonies Ken Croft (manager, The Polo Shop) as Don Bowen, Carmel Business Sales; Florence Berry, Fortier's Drugs Store; Richard Vance of Falge, Vance and Wilsey, Certified Public Accountants; Toni Doyle, Highlands Inn; and Fred Fozounmayeh, Pernille Restaurant.

Marion Brueck, owner of Everyday is Christmas in the Carmel Plaza, was crowned "sweetheart" of the Carmel Business Association. Brueck has been the longest continuous owner of a Carmel business, according to CBA Executive Director Lee Chamberlin.

Brueck came from King City 38 years ago and opened Everyday is Christmas in conjunction with her artist's materials and locally made crafts shop in the Seven Arts building where the Carmel Bay company is now located, at Lincoln and Ocean. The artist's shop was a natural outlet for Brueck, as she was a master craftsman in screen printing and leatherwork herself.

She purchased the gift shop downstairs and every two weeks had a show for local artists' student work, with tea and cookies made by her mother and the art work found by her daughter, Grace. When Christmas time came, she found that she could not stand to put the Christmas things away and decided to keep them out.

The Christmas goodies were kept upstairs with a sign that said: "Upstairs Everyday is Christmas." The original owners of the downstairs area took it back and she moved upstairs. Her Christmas tree in the corner window became a traditional sight for Carmelites and visitors alike. Much later she moved the shop into the Carmel Plaza, where it is today.

BLESSING all her subjects, Marion Brueck — owner of Everyday is Christmas in Carmel Plaza — accepted the title of "sweetheart" of the Carmel Business Association. Brueck has been an owner of a Carmel business for 38 consecutive years. Her grandson, Charles Houghton, stands behind her. Olive Grimes, owner of the Seven Seas gift shop on Dolores Street, can be seen in the background. (Nancy Hills photo.)

The announcement of who was to be the CBA "sweetheart" was a closely guarded secret and came as a surprise to everyone at the dinner, including Marion Brueck. Her grandson Charles Houghton placed the robe on her shoulders and Ellie Lester the crown on her head. Brueck expressed thanks to everyone present.

There were four winners among the raffle tickets sold at the door. Mike Stanton of the Normandy Inn won an overnight stay at the Highlands Inn in one of its spa suites. Mr. and Mrs. Newcomb Taylor won an overnight stay with dinner at the Ventana Inn. Bill Brown, publisher of the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook and Monterey Peninsula Review won a Sunday brunch for four at La Playa; Helga Browne

TWO CARMEL BUSINESSES TO MERGE

A friendly mutual agreement has been reached between Gene Bath, owner/operator of the Carmel Crimpers on Dolores Street and Doreen Gearhart, owner/operator of Hairport, upstairs in the Su Vecino Court on Lincoln Street, to merge into a general partnership under the Hairport name on March 1.

The Carmel Crimpers will move lock, stock and barrel into the Hairport location and Gallery Americana Miner's Inc. will expand into the vacated space.

Bath will bring his barbers as well as his cosmetology license with him when he moves.

"We will combine the best from both salons," Bath said. "The general partnership merger lessens the problems of having a large salon under sole ownership. Someone is here if either of us wants to go away and the responsibility and cost of the equipment and supplies is shared."

Bath added that the "new" salon will continue to serve the more contemporary 15- to 50-year-old clientele that the two salons had catered to in the past.

Leigh McClung, a cosmetologist with Carmel Crimpers, will make the move with Bath. Cosmetologists Kelly Rivas and Carole Bester will remain at Hairport.

Carmel Crimpers started in the 1930s as Purdy's Men's Store, a men's styling salon, and was located behind Fortier's Drugs, Bath said. Hairport was started in 1975, Gearhart said.

PLUS CA CHANGE, PLUS C'EST LA MEME CHOSE

The more some things change, the more they stay the same.

Take, for example, the case of Valley Hardware Co. in the Mid-Valley shopping center. Richard Krueger, owner, sold the store he started eight years ago, and it will have a new owner as of March 1.

The new owner? Why, Karl Krueger — no relation.

Karl Krueger — according to Richard Krueger — plans to keep the business in hardware.

"It was important to turn it over to someone who would keep it a hardware store," Richard Krueger said.

As for himself, Richard Krueger said: "After eight years of working weekends, I'm going to enjoy my freedom." He added he has "enjoyed the experience very much" and has "nothing but the finest feelings about the customers."

"It was a family business and now two of my sons are going away to college, so they cannot help out anymore," he said.

"My wife Barbara is the manager of Bob McGinnis Travel in the mouth of the Valley and now maybe we can get some time to do some traveling," Krueger said. He also is taking flying lessons and I wish him well with that. I chickened out right before I soloed. The sigh of relief from the control tower was audible in two counties.

SAYING GOODBYE

Sometimes being reporter is a double-edged sword. Reporting the sad news of the death of Vice President and Manager of the Carmel branch of the Bank of America William "Bill" Larkin, at the age of 47 from a heart attack at his home in Carmel Valley on Feb. 23, is not an easy thing to do. However, it does give me the advantage of saying a public and heartfelt goodbye to someone whom I considered a very good friend.

In the four months since I met him and his wife Barbara at the Carmel Business Association in September, Bill always took the time to make me feel welcome. We would sit and talk about Carmel, business, life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

He often expressed his love of his family, his home and this community. His concern for his customers went far beyond "doing his job." It was a part of his genuine concern for other people. The warmth and respect for him exhibited by his employees at his Bank of America branch in the Carmel Plaza was always evident whenever I was there.

Though he had come from the Saratoga Bank of America as recently as 1983 to Carmel, he was a member of the Board of Directors of the Carmel Business Association and the Carmel Foundation, vice president of the Kiwanis Club of Carmel, and treasurer of the Ventana Wilderness Society. He spoke with pride of his 28 years with the Bank of America.

I would like to extend my sympathy to his family and that good lady, his wife Barbara.

He as a good, kind and decent man. I already miss him and will for a long time.

New Brushing Concept

"CURVED BRISTLES MAKE SENSE"

Because the bristles are bent to reach the sulcus. The sulcus is the space between the teeth and the gum where the bacteria grow, cause caries and bad breath. The outer bristles are curved and soft to protect and clean the gums. The center bristle is short and stiff to clean the top of the teeth.

SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.

Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

Carmel Rancho Lions Club gives contest awards

ERIC CARSON, a York School student, was selected as the winning speaker in a close contest with Eileen Chow and Susan Thomas, representing Carmel High and Santa Catalina schools respectively, at the annual Carmel Rancho Lions Club student speakers' contest Feb. 14 in the Thunderbird Bookstore.

The much-debated subject, "Television, Master or Servant," was judged by attorney Paul DeLay, Nancy Silva of KMST, and Allston James, a media communication instructor at Monterey Peninsula College.

In addition to the plaques awarded to the winner and the two finalists, recognition certificates were presented to the judges and to the accompanying school coaches. Also, in support of the school effort The Barnyard offices gave complimentary "dinner for two" recognitions to each school participant.

Eric Carson is now on the first step leading to college scholarship grants up to a possible $9,500. The total stake for 22 winning high school contestants throughout California and Nevada this year totals $41,250. The amount has increased over the years in the annual contest sponsored by the California-Nevada Lions Clubs since 1937. The last "all the way" winner from the Monterey Peninsula was Harkjoon Paik in 1953. He is now a Monterey County Superior Court judge.

Eric Carson, now representing himself, his school, and the Carmel Rancho Lions club will next speak, in competition with other Lions Club winners, at the Pacific Grove Blind Center, at 7 p.m. March 14. The public is invited.

Carmel Rancho Lions have also been actively distributing American flags, with a little history, to the lower grades at All Saints' and Tularcitos schools. This is an annual February event by Lions Clubs throughout California.

GOLF TOURNAMENT TO BENEFIT AFRICAN DROUGHT RELIEF FUND

Chefs, wineries, purveyors, waiters, musicians, golf pros and others in the Monterey Peninsula hospitality industry will join forces as volunteers to present a golf tournament and dinner to raise money for the CARE Organization/Africa Drought Relief Fund, Sunday, March 24.

Co-sponsors are the Hyatt Regency Monterey, which will provide the facility for the evening dinner/dance, and Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley, which will provide use of its golf facility for the 18-hole one-day tournament.

Purveyors of the hospitality industry will give the food and beverage needed for the dinner that will be prepared by volunteer chefs from leading Monterey Peninsula hotels and restaurants. Many of the waiters and waitresses serving the dinner, and the musicians providing entertainment, will also be volunteers.

Nick Lombardo, president of Rancho Canada, and Philip Lombardi, general manager of Hyatt Regency Monterey, said: "The hospitality industry is a people-caring business and this is our way of showing how much we care, even for people halfway around the world in a crisis situation such as Africa. We hope the community will help our efforts by participating in this special event."

CARE has been involved on a contract basis in Ethiopia for more than 30 years, said Bonnie D. Long, CARE regional director who attended the initial planning meeting of industry leaders at Rancho Canada earlier this month. "We were amazed that someone was actually calling us to offer help rather than the other way around. This support by the Monterey Peninsula hospitality industry is really remarkable," she said.

Long said 95 cents from each $1 contributed to the CARE "Africa Fund" will reach the famine-stricken area in Ethiopia

5TH DISTRICT REPORT

BY D. W. MADDUX

Poverty war continues

PERHAPS the main reason why just the mention of the term "social welfare program" causes so many people so much consternation is that we frequently do not have a clear idea who is spending that tax money, and for what services — never mind how well.

In Monterey County, the board of supervisors has endeavored to remedy this communication problem by instituting reporting requirements for the various advisory boards and commissions which recommend to the supervisors policies and programs intended to address the needs of the poor.

This report concerns the activities of the Monterey County Community and Children's Services Commission and is directed to the people of the Fifth District from your representatives on that body.

To begin at the end, 1984 saw the Office for Community and Children's Services brought into compliance with the granite realities of public finance, operating within a balanced budget, and yet actually expanding services to the poor — two accomplishments not particularly common in the past. Much of the credit must go to program director Marilyn Clark, who cut the budget the hard way, by eliminating a number of staff positions.

The community service programs themselves are implemented by means of three different approaches.

One group of programs is aimed at the ever-escalating scale of home energy costs, and these are administered directly by the community services department from largely federal appropriations. Between weatherizing homes for long-term savings and intervening to avoid utility cutoffs to low-income families, some 2,500 families were assisted in 1984 at a cost of about $500,000.

THE LARGEST segment of the poverty problem in our county calls for an entirely different, more decentralized approach. We have compiled revealing statistics which make an important point: more than half of the needy are children. When their mothers are included, the figure rises to almost two-thirds.

Stereotypical images notwithstanding, these are the poor in our community. Their problems are addressed through public/private partnerships which require the CCSC to let and manage a large number of contracts with relevant non-profit agencies.

More than $250,000 was spent in the past year to support the Monterey County Food Bank, two emergency shelters for victims of abuse, psychological counseling, a computerized resource directory to aid in finding housing and jobs, and more. Our success rate is gratifyingly high. If problems you have fall into this realm, the staff is there to help you, at 443-1625.

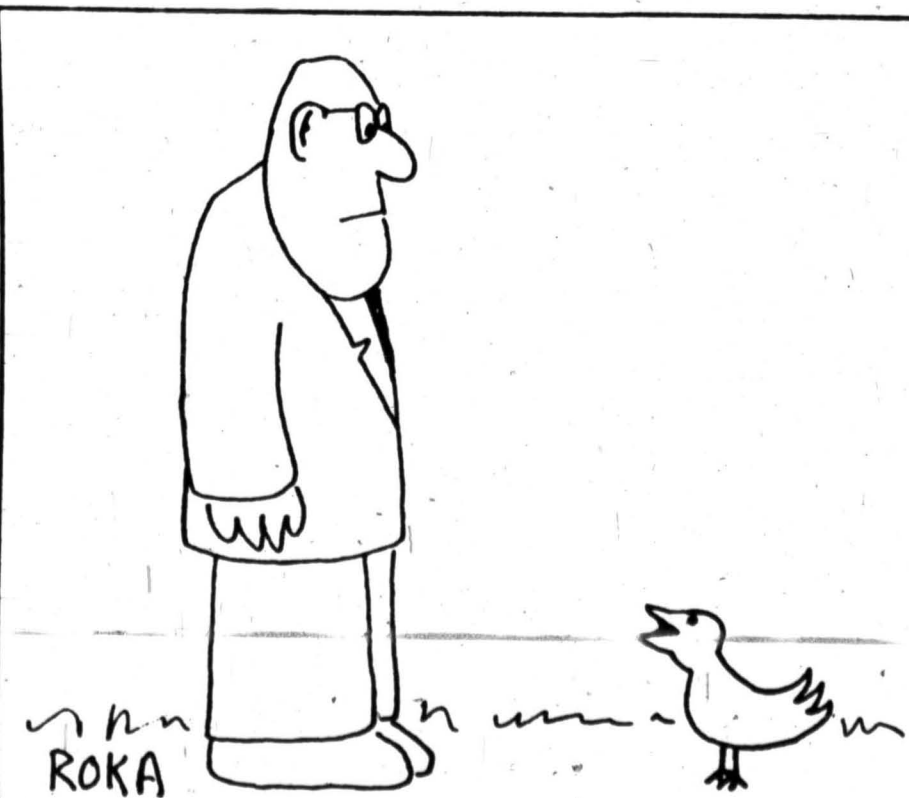

We take considerable pride in the third major area of our activities. In 1984, the CCSC spent some $70,000 to provide seed money for pilot programs, some of which are quite innovative.

The list of projects includes an elementary school computer literacy program (very well received), a contract with Planned Parenthood to hold teenage pregnancy prevention seminars conducted by teenage parents (also demonstrably successful), a program contract with the Boys Club organization to integrate girls into their activities, and more. Hundreds of people have been served, and even more money will be spent this year on such programs.

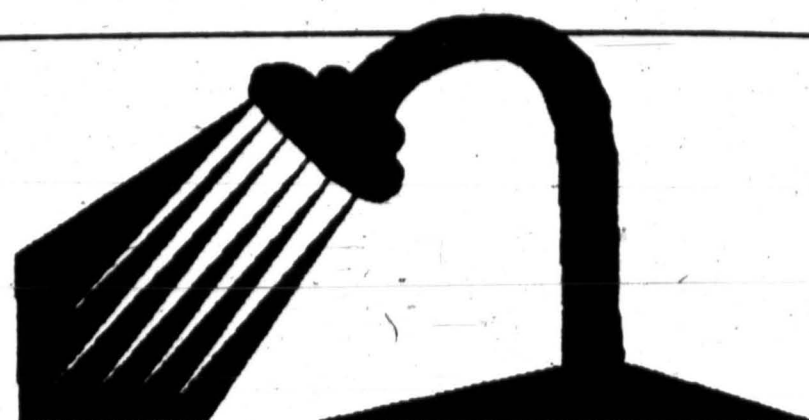

As you can see, the war on poverty isn't lost in Monterey County. It has instead been trimmed to real necessities, and has accepted the common sense rule of cost-effectiveness.

If readers would like more detailed information, they may feel free to contact either Fifth District representative — myself or Candace Ingram (my phone number is 659-2391.)

(D.W. Maddox, a resident of Rippling River handicapped housing facility in Carmel Valley, is the representative of the poor from the Monterey County Fifth Supervisorial District to the Monterey County Community and Children's Services Commission. His report will appear monthly.)

"I'm sorry, Philip, it's over. We should have known it was doomed from the start."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"When you're young, the silliest notions seem like the greatest achievements."
— Pearl Bailey

Rosario Adesso of Brooklyn, New York, recently saw a dream of 78 years come true when he became a citizen. Mr. Adesso arrived here from Sicily in 1906 and went to work to support his wife, then nine children. His 14-hour work-days as a furnace stoker, bargeman and fur-dyer left little time to study for his citizenship. All the waiting was made up for, though, when the grandfather of 14 and great-grandfather of 18 was sworn in as an American citizen a few days after his 100th birthday.

What's the most dangerous part of your home? According to the Health Insurance Association of America, elderly people face the greatest risk on stairways. Each year 531 of every 100,000 Americans suffer injuries on stairs, ramps and landings and a disproportionate number are seniors. Strong railings, non-slip treads and other safety devices should be installed where possible.

You and I were even younger when a penny bent on the trolley tracks was carried as a prized good-luck charm.

His work was featured in numerous galleries in the United States and overseas, including the DeYoung Museum in San Francisco, Royal Watercolor Society of London and National Academy American Watercolor Society Annual in New York City. His work included city scenes in Europe and America and mountain and rural scenes from Americana, such as barns, wagons and Gold Rush towns.

History week spotlights women

ENTERING ITS second year of local celebration, National Women's History Week on the Monterey Peninsula will feature art exhibits and computer workshops, a discount day, film festival, concerts and more.

The successive days of activities are designed to "honor women's accomplishments, awaken pride and inspire growth."

Leslie Simon, workshop coordinator and vice president of the Carmel-based Professional Women's Network of the Monterey Peninsula, said: "I don't think any of us realized the impact of last year until we saw how many women turned out for it."

Women's History Week was first organized in 1977 by a Sonoma County task force that sought, within the local school district, recognition and study of women's achievements. Recognition grew from a local designation of Women's History Week on school calendars to, in 1980, declaration of National Women's History Week with accompanying arts, education and entertainment events scheduled coast to coast.

Peninsula celebration of National Women's History Week began last year. For 1985, organizations as diverse as the League of Women Voters, Monterey Institute of International Studies and YWCA will contribute to the multi-faceted schedule.

According to planning committee members Simon, Carol Donald and Linda Freundlich, aim of the events is to raise funds to purchase educational materials for use in Monterey County schools.

March 3-9 is designated as National Women's History Week. For additional information about activities, call 375-2940 or 375-3966.

Frohman Academy exits Carmel base, stages musical

By ANNE PAPINEAU

AFTER MORE than a year of "working in a shoe box" in Carmel, the Frohman Academy has established a Pacific Grove base, will open its first adult-cast show and has chosen finalists in the first American Musical Theatre Festival playwrighting competition.

"We needed a facility of our own where we could grow," said Mikel Pippi, executive director of the professional school devoted exclusively to training students for careers in musical theater.

This month the Frohman Academy moved from second-floor offices on Ocean Avenue in Carmel to David Avenue School in Pacific Grove.

"This facility was offered to us," Pippi said. "We also have access to the theater at Pacific Grove Middle School. We'll be expanding our programs in Carmel. We've already been working to put six artists-in-residence at Carmel schools. We're working with the Carmel Unified School District to expand our summer program."

Pippi's message is that the Frohman Academy is not exiting

Academy mounts spoof of operettas

Carmel, but instead beefing up programs all over the peninsula from its expanded base of operations.

Opening tonight and playing Thursdays through Sundays is the first "all-adult" production staged by the Frohman Academy. Little Mary Sunshine, a send-up of Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy musicals, will be presented at California Repertory Theatre in Pacific Grove.

"It's the first musical ever in that theater," said Pippi, who also directs this "naughty operetta" designed for family audiences. "Cal Rep is a good theater. The (onstage) poles have been a challenge. You have to choreograph around the poles. We've turned the poles into beautiful little sapling trees. Everybody has to dance around so they don't kill themselves."

The 18-member cast of Little Mary Sunshine is made up entirely of peninsula residents, Pippi explained. "Some have been in our program since the beginning."

Many of these locals will be familiar to peninsula theater buffs. The cast includes LaVonne Rae Andrews in the title role and John Newkirk as Captain Jim. Robert Basgall will portray Corporal Billy Jester, Leila Knight is a flirtatious girlfriend, Caterina Micieli plays Madame Ernestine and Les Knight is General Oscar Fairfax.

The cast also includes Chuck Doolittle as Chief Brown Bear, Paul Pistore as an Indian guide plus a chorus of "Young Ladies from the Eastchester Finishing School" and "Young Men of the United States Forest Rangers."

PIPPI SAID opening night tickets will be offered at $20 per person as a benefit for the Frohman Academy scholarship fund. A series of benefits, Pippi added, is planned to assist other area non-profit agencies.

Choreographer for Little Mary Sunshine is peninsula dancer Gloria Elber. Music direction is by Bob Phillips, who will also play piano. Sets and lights were designed by Los Angeles Drama Critics' Circle Award winner George Gizienski, who worked with the Frohman Academy on its summer 1984 workshop production, Bobby Sox to Broadway.

Little Mary Sunshine marks Pippi's musical directorial debut with the Frohman Academy. Executive director of the Academy since it was established in October of 1983, Pippi's career resume includes founding and serving as artistic manager of the New Las Palmas and The Cast theaters in Hollywood.

"I'll try to direct one musical a year from now on," Pippi remarked. "I have to remember I'm a director."

Also on the Frohman Academy agenda is selection of three winners in its first playwriting competition.

"Over 130 entries were received from all over the United States, and we even got one from London," Pippi reported via news release. A $1,000 prize will go to each of three winners, and the composers, lyricists and librettists will be invited to participate in productions of their shows during the first American Musical Theatre Festival. Pippi said the festival, sponsored by the Frohman Academy, will be presented locally this fall or winter.

"We're down to 15 finalists," Pippi said. Final selection will be carried out by the National Music Theater Network in New York, which includes a board of professionals from the Broadway community. The group publishes a catalogue for use by theaters nation-wide.

Among the finalists is The Time Machine, a musical based on an H.G. Wells story, written by R. Wright Campbell and Brian Bennett of Carmel.

With multiple projects planned and a show on the boards, the Frohman Academy may yet succeed in importing a bit of Broadway to the Monterey Peninsula.

The Academy is the legacy of the late Sidney Frohman, Jr., Carmel Valley resident and descendant of a prominent theatrical family. Frohman acted in peninsula theater and created the Sidney Frohman Jr. Foundation for the Performing Arts.

A SEND-UP of those Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy musicals is Little Mary Sunshine by Rick Besoyan. The Frohman Academy production of the musical includes, from left, Leila Knight as Nancy Twinkle, Robert Basgall as Corporal Billy Jester and LaVonne Rae Andrews in the title role. (Photograph by Bob Doerr.)

The non-profit foundation sponsors several local programs, including artists-in-the-schools, in which professionals like The Wiz choreographer Carlton Johnson lead master classes at area public and private schools, and a two-year professional program for gifted students.

Alliance on Aging seeks volunteers

The Alliance on Aging has started a new program for seniors in Monterey County. To make it work, volunteers are needed.

"We're looking for the kind of person who has been wanting to do something for their community," said Wally LeValley, senior discount coordinator for the alliance's Information, Referral and Assistance Program.

"We're especially interested in the person who likes meeting new people and enjoys working with others."

The alliance has just become the sponsoring agency for a new Monterey County senior discount program. "It has a great deal to offer seniors and the business community," said LeValley. "But to be a success, the project must have a core of trained volunteers."

By the end of March the alliance will start training volunteers to introduce the Golden State Senior Discount Program to businesses on the Monterey Peninsula. LeValley explained that the Golden State Program was created by the state of California to "coordinate existing senior discounts or create new ones where none exist."

"This is a great opportunity for volunteers to learn new skills and sharpen old ones," explained the coordinator. "And they'll be working on a vitally needed project."

For further information about the training, contact Wally LeValley at 646-4636, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Comedy in Cherry Hall

THERE ARE still two weekends in which to see Museum, the play by Tina Howe which GroveMont Community Theater is staging here.

The play is directed by Larry Welch, has a cast of 16 and has turned Cherry Hall, quite suitably, into an art gallery on the final day of a group show of moderns. Enter an assortment of gallery-goers and long-suffering museum guards, and comedy comes into flower. I can say that this plan has depth, along with much light comment on the pretentious in the art world.

Museum will play Friday and Saturday, March 1, 2, 8 and 9. Curtain time — if we had a curtain — is 8 p.m. For reservations, call 624-7491.

SPRING BOOK SALE

The fund-raising committee here is planning a benefit book sale Saturday and Sunday, March 16 and 17. Understandably enough, this sale will have a St. Patrick's Day flavor, with some of Spiers Ruskell's paintings of Irish cottages for sale on the walls and "Irish" tea and coffee to be served with pastries.

The committee is asking for donations of books of all kinds. Paperbacks are welcome (but not magazines). If you have books to give for this cause, please call us here or call Sally McPhail at 624-8087. All donations are tax-deductible, and we can make arrangements to pick up books if necessary.

Astronaut to speak

AIR FORCE Reserve Brigadier General Charles M. Duke, a member of Apollo 16 lunar mission, will be keynote speaker for Monterey's 10th annual Prayer Breakfast. The breakfast begins at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, March 5, at the Monterey Conference Center. For ticket information, call 375-1688.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

Symphony concert lacked joy, rhythmic definition

THE FOURTH series of concerts by the Monterey County Symphony was last weekend under the direction of James Setapen, and featured pianist Leon Bates as soloist.

Solo keyboard concertos date only from the early 18th Century. Before that century was over, Mozart had brought the form to a peak of achievement never surpassed and seldom equalled. At that time, composers wrote concertos for their own use, so they tend to be virtuoso, showcase pieces.

Chopin wrote two concertos, and both date from the period before he went to France, 1829-30. Haydn had been dead scarcely 20 years and Beethoven but two. They reflect the influence of the Italian music he had heard in Poland, and no doubt provide us with an accurate account of his strengths as a pianist.

Bates played No. 2 in F minor (which was actually written before No. 1, but that is the way of music history). It illustrates Chopin's compositional strengths and his weaknesses. The succession of beautiful melodies is Chopin at his best. The orchestral writing is not. Chopin was not at home with the orchestra and it seems that he realized it, since he left no orchestral works.

The overall lack of formal coherence will bother some listeners, as it does me. But for those who can enjoy these works just as they are, there is no argument and great beauty in them.

Schumann also was primarily a composer for piano, although he wrote in many other media (including words). There is considerable interest in his four symphonies, although one is never able to escape the feeling that they are orchestrated piano pieces. This concert offered the first symphony, Spring.

Opening the concert was Rounds for String Orchestra by the American, David Diamond. This was a curious choice to accompany the two supremely romantic works. It is in three movements and is naturally of a polyphonic nature, since they are rounds. Although contemporary, Diamond is quite conservative, and the piece does not make severe demands on the audience. A good curtain-raiser.

THE PROBLEMS with the concert were general, and plagued with each piece in its turn. There was simply insufficient attention to detail, which showed up especially in the indifferent phrasing in the low strings and the uncertain attacks in the winds.

There was a general lack of that rhythmic incisiveness that illuminates the character of a piece. The last movement of the Chopin carries the marking "Allegro vivace," by joy and liveliness got lost somewhere. Likewise, the scherzo of the Schumann was heavy-handed.

Given the choice of program, there was no opportunity for molding work into a dramatic form such as can be done with, say, Beethoven. Large romantic works make their own, quite different, demands, however. The episodic nature of the music needs to be exploited, meaning great sensitivity to each change of mood and color. The excitement will grow out of that.

Bates played well enough, even impressively now and then. But the sense of partnership between soloist and conductor/orchestra was not there and the concerto became, finally, boring.

We must all be patient this season as the orchestra chooses a new permanent conductor. There is considerable potential in this group of musicians but, like any other large group of musicians, they need a leader week after week after week

Competition in Lisbon, and the prestigious Michaels Awards based on career achievement.

Fred Sherry, cello, studied at the Juilliard School with Leonard Rose and Channing Robbins and made his New York debut as winner of the Young Concert Artists International Auditions.

Theodore Arm, violin, received a doctorate in performance from the Juilliard School where he studied with Joseph Fuchs. During the past few seasons he has toured Italy, Finland, Scotland, Belgium and Canada with the Gaillard Ensemble and performed with the Group for Contemporary Music and the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. Dr. Arm has been a participant for many years at Chamber Music Northwest in addition to appearances at the Mostly Mozart and Caramoor Festivals. He plays a 1652 Amati violin.

Steven Tenenbom, viola, a native of Arizona, studied at the University of Southern California and at the Curtis Institute of Music. Heidi Castleman, Michael Tree, Karen Tuttle and Martha Katz were among his teachers.

Single tickets are $8 at the door before the concert. For information and membership in the Chamber Music Society, call 372-5981.

insisting on accurate attacks, accurate intonation, graceful phrase endings from everyone in the section, more care with articulation, and so on.

It is also difficult to judge the conductors fairly at a concert. They have very limited rehearsal time with the orchestra and they have to make sometimes grim choices about what gets worked on and what doesn't.

One really needs to see a conductor in rehearsal to get a true assessment of his or her worth. It is safe to assume that all the candidates are doing their best under the circumstances.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

GroveMont's 'Museum' too good to miss

CHERRY HALL racks up another winner with GroveMont Community Theater's sparkling production of Tina Howe's Museum, a fast-paced one-act which features 15 performers in 40 roles.

Howe's substance-laden dialogue uses the final day of a museum exhibit aptly titled "Broken Silence" as the backdrop for satire on such far-flung themes as artistic snobspeak, the degeneration of artistic sensibility in America, the mindless adulation of art faddists and much more — all skillfully presented by quickly sketched characters who represent the idiosyncracies of practically everybody.

Cherry Hall's diminutive Carmel theater has been convincingly transformed into an exhibition of modern art, complete with objets d'art. These include a quartet of blank canvases, a series of small pottery and "found material" sculptures, and the exhibit's piece de resistance: four life-sized cloth dolls hung on a clothes line, a "construction" mischievously titled, "Wet Dream Hung Out to Dry."

The sculptures, by Catherine Miller, and the "construction," by Stephen Moorer and Dale Smeeth, are not unlike typical "modern art" pieces. The entire set, ostensibly the creation of general manager Stephen Moorer and production assistant Denise Clifford, is prize-worthy.

The audience, seated diagonally across from each other, unwittingly becomes part of both exhibit and performance, for the lighting includes and audience in its nimbus, and the boundaries between audience and performer are blurred still more when performers sit in the audience during the play's action.

Director Larry Welch manages a large cast in a very small working space astonishingly well. The action is crisply blocked — no mean trick with as many as four separate bits happening at once. Costume changes, entrances and exits are perfectly smooth despite Cherry Hall's scant offstage room, and the cast of 15 as all 40 of its roles down pat.

Museum runs one hour and 15 minutes, but it seems much shorter than that, for the multitude of action and the complexity of the lines command the audience's full attention.

Is this art?

PETER ZIFF (Michael Halton) "contributes" to the artwork in his own special way in the GroveMont Community Theatre production, Museum. Museum plays 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through March 8 at Cherry Hall in Carmel. For ticket information, call 649-6852 or 624-7491.

In a cast of fine performances, the following stand out.

SARAH WELCH is sultry perfection as Tink Solheim, the self-absorbed acolyte of the absent sculptress who reveals, with melodramatic flair, the sculptress' dark secrets. Jennifer Perrito is likewise faultless as Chloe Trapp, the gobbledegook-spouting curator of the exhibit. Perrito combines heavy-weight artspeak with a wide-eyed delivery for convincing and hilarious results.

Paul Gaucher and Jim Pittman are wonderful as a pair of effete art enthusiasts who needle the museum guard and dominate the room (which isn't easy, in the circumstances) with their doleful pronouncements and serious disagreements on the future of the arts in America.

Michael Lojkovic and Katie DeLay are delightful as a young French-speaking couple whose romance only just survives their differences of artistic opinion. DeLay also shines as Barbara Castle, a plastic fashion-plate who holds forth at length on her horror of synthetics. (The word "synthetic" sits on her upper lip like a putrid smell.) And Lojkovic creates three more characters with great economy, changing his appearance, expression and gait entirely.

In very small bits, Michael Halton is splendid as a silent derelict obviously trying to keep warm and a redneck suffering a rare exposure to an art lecture. In the first case with no lines at all, and in the second case with few, Halton creates vivid, believable characters by using his expressive face and large stature to maximum comic effect.

Denise Clifford likewise demonstrates versatility as a dowdy housewife trapped in the wires of an overloud tape recorder, a chic art aficionado, and, perhaps most affectingly, an elderly woman silently communicating with her equally convincing silent mate (Paul Gaucher).

Regina Clegg is hilarious as a breathless sexpot set afire by the museum guard's neutrally delivered directions to the postcard rack. And Andy Philpot, as the guard whose task it is to manage the onslaught of no fewer than 25 actions in 75 minutes, is a perfect Everyguard — square-chinned, clear-eyed, middle American. His middle class values are strained beyond their limits by the motley assortment of incidents that constitute his day's work.

If you have ever visited an art exhibit, it is likely you will recognize yourself in one of the 40 characters who parade before you, for Howe has managed, in this brief play, to sketch incisively yet with affection almost every conceit of art lover and artist.

Imaginatively produced and crisply performed, Museum is simply too good to miss. It runs just two more weekends, and Cherry Hall has only 40 seats. They who hesitate won't see it.

Collaborative exhibit opens at 'Friends'

A COLLABORATIVE showing of images by Don Gregory Anton and Lewis deSoto, Heaven and Earth, opens Friday, March 1 at The Friends of Photography Gallery. An opening preview and reception for the artists is planned 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Friday. Anton and deSoto will also discuss their work in the gallery at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 2. The public is invited to attend both events.

The title of the exhibition is drawn from the I Ching, the Chinese "Book of Changes." The heaven and earth symbol, which poses three solid lines representing heaven against three broken lines symbolizing earth, is one of the 64 hexagrams of the I Ching. The hexagrams are said to contain profound meanings applicable to daily life. The heaven and earth hexagram serves as a symbol for the union and interrelation of the two fundamental powers in the universe.

The exhibition presents two different approaches to an exploration of what Anton and deSoto term "the infinite space" that exists at the place where heaven and earth unite. Anton focuses within himself, creating black and white images that explore subconscious and conscious states of mind. Although his photographs are highly personal, autobiographical statements, they touch upon emotions and experiences common to both photographer and viewer. Anton's revelatory imagery affects the viewer at the level of the senses, triggering both memory and recognition.

Included in the exhibition are both multiple exposures and multiply printed images, as well as more traditional single photographs. Many of the pieces were made by Anton in response to emotionally charged personal experiences. In a group of photographs of the mummies of Guanajuato, Mexico, for example, Anton expresses his response to a personal confrontation with death. Extremely conscious of his Hispanic origins, Anton faces the physical remains of unearthed cultural relatives.

While Anton makes photographic representations of an interior world, Lewis deSoto is concerned with the exterior physical world in his exploration of the place where heaven and earth unite.

His color photographs, made during the past four years, reveal a fascination with time. Recording time on the negative in relation to the varying duration of exposure, deSoto examines "the notions that man has about his existence in relation to the particular and to the infinite." He juxtaposes qualities or objects associated with human time with analogues for cosmic time, and for limitless outer space. The resulting photographs draw the viewer's attention to the unacknowledged or forgotten connection that exists between humans and the cosmos.

In creating his photographs, deSoto first conceives an idea, then constructs a visual representation of his concept. Some of his completed photographs are accompanied by detailed blueprint drawings that map out the structure of the photograph and describe the materials used.

Located at San Carlos and Ninth in Sunset Center, Carmel, the gallery is open 1 to 5 p.m. daily. For details, call 624-6330.

Edward Weston's career chronicled at gallery

PHOTOGRAPHS by Edward Weston, whose images made photographic history for 50 years, will be featured at Photography West Gallery, Carmel, in an exhibition which opens Friday, March 1, and closes on Thursday, April 11. The gallery is near the southeast corner of Dolores at Ocean.

Discovery is the key to Weston's approach. "I start with no preconceived idea," he explained in 1930. "Discovery excites me to focus — then rediscovery through the lens..." This continual amazement over his subject matter produced both the intense realism and the sense of mysticism inherent in his images, the "flame of recognition" which illumined the esoteric within the obvious.

The intuitive quality of Weston's work was profoundly appreciated by the late Ansel Adams, who called Weston "one of the few great creative artists" and explained: "He has recreated the mother-forms and forces of nature; he has made these forms eloquent of the fundamental unity of the world. His work illuminates man's journey toward perfection of the spirit."

Weston's first New York exhibition opened in 1930 at Delphic Studios. Major retrospectives took place at the Museum of Modern Art in New York in 1946 and in Paris in 1950. Among hundreds of Weston shows, "The World of Edward Weston" directed by Beaumont and Nancy Newhall, was circulated by The Smithsonian Institution.

Photography West Gallery is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For more information, call 625-1587.

A Wedding to Remember

Mediterranean Market caters to your needs

Twenty-seven years ago, Phil and Carla Coniglio opened the Mediterranean Market at the corner of Ocean Avenue and Mission Street in Carmel. They began what has now become a long-established tradition of excellence in gourmet foods, fine imported and domestic wines, and a delicatessen known all over the world.

These days you're just as likely to find the second generation — Phil Jr., Cara Mia and Lisa — busy taking care of the family business on a daily basis. Plan your wedding reception with one of Carmel's finest traditions by calling Cara Mia Coniglio at the Mediterranean Market.

She'll be delighted to meet with you to arrange all of your catering needs for your wedding reception at a private banquet facility, at your home or in a garden setting. She'll handle every detail of the food and beverage, and work within your budget to make sure that you receive the most for your money. Cara Mia specializes in deliciously prepared, beautifully presented hot and cold buffets, which look good, taste good and go a long way.

"You don't have to spend huge amounts of money on trays of fancy hors d'oeuvres that disappear in a few minutes. We've had great success with our buffets which include meats, cheese, seafood, salads, fruit platters, vegetable trays and gourmet specialty items. Everything is fresh and prepared right here on the premises."

Their liquor license also enables them to provide a complete bar service, which includes a selection of champagnes in several price ranges. They're also known for their beautifully prepared fruit, wine and cheese baskets which they'll deliver to the bridal suite for the happy couple to enjoy upon their arrival.

And for an incredibly romantic picnic on the beach, call Cara Mia and order a picnic to go. She'll prepare a gourmet feast for small or large appetites, and put together everything you'll need — even the wine and glasses.

P.S.: If he hasn't popped the question yet, ask Cara Mia about a fully catered candlelight dinner for two. She'll handle every detail and sneak out the back door. All you have to do is look beautiful!

Bob Doerr Photography offers personal touch

Portrait and wedding photography is a very personal thing, and photographer Bob Doerr and his wife Ann like to make sure their clients before they even think about loading the camera.

"Very few people are comfortable with photographers initially," says Ann. "So Bob and I like to introduce ourselves first. We invite them to come up and have a cup of coffee, and take a look at our work so they can see the kind of thing we do."

"They may love our work, but not feel comfortable with us. Or they may feel good about us but not about our style of work. It's really important that people find the kind of photographer that's right for them, because a photographer is really like a guest at the wedding. The best compliment we can receive is when someone says that they didn't even see us, or when they look at a photograph they didn't even know was being taken."

YOUR WEDDING photography actually begins long before the wedding day with an engagement portrait. A unique feature offered by Doerr Photography is your engagement portrait ready and on view during the reception.

Visiting Bob's studio in Pacific Grove is like visiting a fine photographic gallery. It's easy to get a feel for the kind of work he does, because it's a pleasure to look at. He excels in shooting environmental portraits — on the beach, in the woods or in natural settings — wherever people feel comfortable, where they feel like themselves.

Bob also has a special knack for working with children and toddlers to bring out their personalities on film, and he always allows several hours for children's portraits.

"We enjoy working with children, and we love people in general," Ann said. "I don't think you can have a photography business unless you love people."

He also does a lot of work for non-profit associations like the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, the Community Store at the American Tin Cannery and the Sidney Frohman, Jr. Foundation for the Performing Arts. He does a lot of convention work, as well as commercial and aerial photography. He's a member of the Professional Photographers of America and both the Monterey Peninsula and Pacific Grove Chambers of Commerce.

There's lots of good reasons to call Doerr Photography at 649-0198 in Pacific Grove.

Enchanted Brides arranges the wedding — from gowns to rice

Once you've set your wedding date, Enchanted Brides of Monterey, located at 498 Foam Street near Cannery Row, will help you with everything from your invitations to the gown you wear and the champagne you drink at your reception.

Sally Curatolo and Marie Bruno each grew up on the Monterey Peninsula, and they started Enchanted Brides almost three years ago after having gone through the agonies and frustrations of wedding arrangements for their daughters.

"We were going all over town for months, picking out invitations, photographers and florists and looking for shoes, lingerie, wedding accessories and caterers," Sally said.

"We wanted to establish a complete bridal shop that could help with all of the arrangements, because the happiest time of your life should not have to be cluttered with a million details and frustrations.

"We carry more than 200 wedding gowns in the shop," Marie said. "And we can order any of the gowns featured in either Brides or Modern Brides magazines. Our complete alteration department is available to meet the special needs of a petite woman, or the woman with a fuller figure. We have a selection of dresses for the bridesmaids, flower girl and mother of the bride, and you won't have to go anywhere else to find shoes (which can be dyed to match), stockings, slips and strapless bras."

Marie and Sally want to make you the happiest bride in the world. Stop by Enchanted Brides and let them show you how easy it can be.

How to handle important wedding details

Let the world know you two are going to be married with an announcement in your newspaper. Here, a guide for getting engagement and wedding announcements published — on time:

Find out your newspaper's requirements. Once you've told your family and closest friends about your engagement, you will probably want to publish the news in your paper. The first step: call the newspaper and ask for the society editor, or simply for the person who handles wedding and engagement announcements. Ask him or her about what information should be included, deadlines, and if they print photos (of you alone, you two together?). The newspaper may send you a printed form to fill out. If your fiancé's parents live in a different town, ask them if they would like an announcement to appear in their local papers, then call those papers too, for their requirements and deadlines.

Word engagement announcements correctly. The basic engagement announcement is worded like this: "Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lee Johnson of Rockville, Connecticut, announce the engagement of their daughter, Allison, to Mr. James Linden Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Dean Roberts of Oxford, Maine. An April wedding is planned." (If you know the exact date, time, and place of your wedding, you can add it.) You may want a second paragraph mentioning your schooling and jobs. For example: "Miss Johnson graduated from Rockville High School and Magna Cum Laude from Ohio State University. She is now working for Jones-Smith Inc." If your parents are divorced, the parent you live with announces: "Mrs. Smith Robes (or the more modern, Mrs. Jane Robes) announces the engagement of her daughter, Lois Robes, to..." If your parents are divorced and friendly, they might wish to announce the news together: "Mrs. John Robes of New York and Mrs. Smith Robes of Charles Drive, Chicago, announce the engagement of their daughter..." Divorced and remarried parents? The correct form would be, "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Grant of...announce the engagement of Mrs. Grant's daughter, Lois Robes to...Miss Robes is also the daughter of Mr. John Robes." If you're marrying for the second time, you can announce your engagement in local papers in the usual way, mentioning your first marriage if you want, or if the paper requires it.

Gather wedding information early. A wedding announcement tells the details of your wedding. If you want it published on the day of your wedding, you may have to submit the information to your newspaper two or three weeks in advance. The typical wording: "Miss Judith Marie Dunden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Dunden of New London, was married today to Patrick Vincent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark T. Vincent of Greenwich. The wedding took place at Trinity Church in New London, with the Reverend Donald Gordon officiating." From there, use your paper's announcements as a guide. Nearly all papers include names of your best man and maid or matron of honor, where you and your fiancé went to school, and where you each work. Some list the job titles of the couple's parents, and even grandparents; or tell about the bride's and maids' dress and wedding flowers. Other papers list out-of-town guests; descriptions of mothers' dresses, church and reception site; the name you will use after you're married; and where you two will live. You may have to do some research — exactly what kind of fabric is your dress made of, what was your grandfather's job title?

Mail materials carefully. You've gathered all your information — now type your engagement or wedding announcement news double-spaced, on plain paper (unless your paper provides a special form). Include your name (or your mother's, or fiancé's) and daytime telephone number, so editors can call to double-check information. Put the date you want the announcement to appear on the top of the page. In most cases, photos should be black and white glossies. On the back of the photo, tape your name and the photographer's name, if he or she should be credited. Mail (with sufficient postage) well ahead of deadlines. Then look forward to seeing your announcements in print!

Who pays for what...

Who pays for what. The bride's family is traditionally responsible for the wedding ceremony, the cost of the reception as well. Nowadays, however, the groom or his family may offer to share wedding costs (paying for all the liquor or flowers at the reception, for instance). Otherwise, costs are divided like this:

The bride (or her family) usually pays these wedding expenses:

- Invitations, announcements, enclosures.
- Wedding dress, veil, accessories.
- Trousseau of clothes and lingerie.
- Bouquets or corsages for honor attendant, bridesmaids, and flower girl.
- Flowers for the church and reception.
- Engagement and wedding photographs.
- Rental fee (if any) for the church.
- Fees for the sexton, organist, soloist.
- Rental of aisle carpet, marquee, other equipment.
- Transportation of bridal party to ceremony and reception sites.
- Reception, including food, drinks, music, decorations, professional services (unless the groom's family offers to pay a part of these expenses).
- Groom's ring (for a double ring ceremony).
- Wedding gift for the groom.
- Gifts for bride's attendants.
- Hotel lodging (if necessary) for any bridesmaids from out-of-town.
- Bride's engraved personal stationery.

The groom (or his family) usually pays these wedding expenses:

- Bride's engagement and wedding rings.
- Marriage license.
- Clergyman's or judge's fee (it can range from $10-$100; ask).
- Bride's flowers, including going-away corsage and bouquet (see below).
- Boutonnieres for men in wedding party.
- Corsages for mothers (see below).
- Wedding gift for the bride.
- Complete wedding trip.
- Gifts for the best man and ushers.
- Hotel lodging (if necessary) for out-of-town ushers.

Expenses which are optional or are set of local custom:

- Bride's bouquet, traditionally a gift from the groom, may be purchased by bride's family as part of the outfit.
- Corsages for mothers, grandmothers are provided by the groom, but bride may buy those for her mother, grandmother.
- Bachelor dinner is given by the groom in some areas, by his attendants or his male friends in other places.
- Rehearsal dinner is given by groom's family in many areas, but may be given by the bride's family or friends.
- Attendants' dresses are usually bought by each person, or bride may buy them.
- Bridesmaids' luncheon is usually given by the bride, but may be given by her attendants or her family.

Featured this week at The Barnyard: It's Summer in South America

Even though the days are still short in this hemisphere, the flavor of South and Central America can be found at Pampas. You'll discover an eclectic mix of clothing, blankets, rugs, jewelry — fine samples of artful weaving and skilled leatherwork and all handmade. The carved wooden masks are of particular interest — handsome, one of a kind pieces for accent or collection. Pampas also displays fascinating works in paint, ceramic & sculpture by California artists Peter Winter, Lygia Chappellet, and Catherine Schmid-Maybach.

You're invited to come and enjoy...se habla español, por supuesto.

Tempt Your Sweet

You can probably find Sweet Temptations with your eyes closed by following the exquisite scent of their fudge in the making: they make it by hand, using only real cream and butter, no preservatives. Sweet Temptations has Ghiradelli chocolate, an inviting selection of truffles, hot roasted nuts, and lots of novelty and hard-to-find candies. One of their biggest hits is the sugar-free stuff, including delicious taffy in several different flavors.

Whether it's chocolate-covered espresso beans to help you through a long day or a splendid gift box for your sweetheart, look no further than Sweet Temptations.
